NATURE & SCOPE

NHSCC

NHSCC is the membership organisation of Clinical Commissioning Groups (CCGs). CCGs are the NHS organisations that have since April 2013 had responsibility for planning and funding local health services across England.

Launched in June 2012, NHSCC was established to give clinical commissioners a strong, independent and collective voice. It was set up through a partnership between three organisations: the NHS Alliance, National Association of Primary Care and the NHS Confederation. NHSCC operates within its own governance arrangements whilst as a networked organisation of the NHS Confederation.

The role of NHSCC is to help CCGs secure the best possible health outcomes for their communities and patients. It gives CCGs a strong influencing voice from the frontline to the wider NHS, national bodies, government, parliament and the media – ensuring that the views of local CCG leaders are represented and heard at a national level. We have created networks where CCGs can share their experience and expertise; and we provide information, support, tools and resources to help CCGs do their job better.

NHSCC is very much member driven and is committed to delivering programmes of work that are shaped and developed by members, reflecting their priorities and expertise. To understand more about NHSCC please visit our website www.nhscc.org

The NHS Confederation

The NHS Confederation brings together and convenes all parts of the health system. Our 500 plus members span the full range of organisations that provide and commission services, including: acute, community, mental health and ambulance service trusts; independent providers; clinical commissioning groups; and academic health science networks. We also represent the interests of the health and care system on major system-wide issues. This role is more vital than ever as every part of England moves towards integrated care system status by April 2021.

We also work across England, Wales and Northern Ireland, and have a European Office focused on Brexit and international learning opportunities.

The regional team of the NHS Confederation supports the work of integrated care systems in four ways:

1. Sense-making of the changing health and care landscape in a concise and accessible way
2. Representing the interests of our members at the highest levels ensuring their views and concerns are heard in the political, professional and public arena
3. Influencing the development of national policy relevant to members across government and arms-length bodies
4. Supporting members by providing a 'safe space' where they can share views and explore ideas about the issues they face.

The regional team supports the development of integrated care systems through bringing people together virtually and face to face to share, learn and exchange ideas and through supporting the dissemination of knowledge and learning about integrated care. They work closely with ICS Chairs and leads to provide support to them as well Programme Directors, Clinical leads, Mental health leads and Non-Executive Directors. They also support the development of partnership working through bringing together senior leaders from different backgrounds to share thinking and ideas on integration.
