1 NHS Wales Managing Attendance at Work Policy

1.0 The Core Principles of NHS Wales:

- We put patients and users of our services first: We work with the public and patients/service users through co-production, doing only what is needed, no more, no less and trying to avoid harm. We are honest, open, empathetic and compassionate. We ensure quality and safety above all else by providing the best care at all times.
- We seek to improve our care: We care for those with the greatest health need first, making the most effective use of all skills and resources and constantly seeking to fit the care and services we provide to users' needs. We integrate improvement into everyday working, by being open to change in all that we do, which also reduces harm and waste.
- We focus on wellbeing and prevention: We strive to improve health and remove inequities by working together with the people of Wales so as to ensure their wellbeing now and in future years and generations.
- We reflect on our experiences and learn: We invest in our learning and development. We make decisions that benefit patients and users of our services by appropriate use of the tools, systems and environments which enable us to work competently, safely and effectively. We actively innovate, adapt and reduce inappropriate variation whilst being mindful of the appropriate evidence base to guide us.

- We work in partnership and as a team: We work with individuals including patients, colleagues, and other organisations; taking pride in all that we do, valuing and respecting each other, being honest and open and listening to the contribution of others. We aim to resolve disagreements effectively and promptly and we have a zero tolerance of bullying or victimization of any patient, service user or member of employees.
- We value all who work for the NHS: We support all our colleagues in doing the jobs they have agreed to do. We will regularly ask about what they need to do their work better and seek to provide the facilities they need to excel in the care they give. We will listen to our colleagues and act on their feedback and concerns.

They have been developed to help and support employees working in NHS Wales.

NHS Wales is about people, working with people, to care for people. These Core Principles describe how we can work together to make sure that what we do and how we do it is underpinned by a strong common sense of purpose which we all share and understand.

The NHS is continually under pressure to deliver more services, with better outcomes and maintain and increase quality against the backdrop of significant financial challenge, high levels of public expectation and with a population which is getting older and with increased levels of chronic conditions.

These principles have been developed to help address some of the pressures felt by employees in responding to these demands. They will re-balance the way we work together so we are less reliant on process and are supported to do the right thing by being guided by these principles when applying policies and procedures to the workforce.

As people working within the health service, we will all use them to support us to carry out our work with continued dedicated commitment to those using our services, during times of constant change.

The Principles are part of an ongoing commitment to strengthen the national and local values and behaviour frameworks already established across Health Boards and Trusts.

They have been developed in partnership with Trade Unions, employers and employees.

The Principles will be used to create a simpler and consistent approach when it comes to managing workplace employment issues.

This Policy and its How to Procedures must be applied equitably and with sufficient flexibility to ensure that the Core Principles of NHS Wales are not compromised. Managers are expected to use their *discretion in their application of this policy to promote and prioritise the values and behaviours of:

2.0 Policy Aims, Objectives and Approach

2.1 Policy Aims

The aims of the policy are to:

- ensure that employees are treated according to their circumstances and needs

- outline the requirements of employees in respect of consistent and effective attendance at work to ensure continuity of service provision
- clearly set out the responsibilities of the employees and managers
- ensure fair treatment of employees with a disability and ensure that obligations in respect of the Equality Act 2010 are met
- adhere to Agenda for Change and Medical and Dental terms of service in the provision of managing attendance at work
- acknowledge an employee's right to sickness absence and pay, within the scope of the policy, when they are unable to work due to illness or injury
- ensure managers support employees when they are unable to work due to sickness.

2.2 Policy Objectives

The objectives of the policy are to:

- support the health and wellbeing of employees in the workplace
- support employees to return to work following a period of sickness absence safely and as quickly as possible
- support employees to sustain their attendance at work.

2.3 Policy Approach – Supporting the Health and Wellbeing of Employees in the Workplace

A consistently good experience of work is recognised to be a positive health outcome: good work can truly be good for your health. However, a negative overall experience of work is considered by experts to have a greater impact on health than being unemployed. We recognise that our employees are our greatest asset and are essential to the sustainability of our organisation and our aim is to provide the highest possible clinical standards of care to the people of Wales.

The NHS Wales workforce is ageing and there is a recognised correlation between the age of the workforce and sickness absence. There will be an increasing need to retain older workers and therefore, we need an effective way to manage sickness absence whilst supporting the health and wellbeing of our employees, which is a national NHS priority.

Health and wellbeing incorporates a number of factors, which include physical, psychological, social, economic and environmental. If any of these are out of balance, then this can have a negative impact on wellbeing.

Every job brings certain pressures, demands and challenges and these can be motivating and satisfying. However, individuals react to circumstances both work related and personal in many different ways. These pressures may lead to a negative situation, which affects wellbeing. The NHS in Wales is committed to the introduction of strategies that support the maximisation of health and wellbeing in the workplace, including early interventions that support employees to maintain a healthy wellbeing.

The National Health and Wellbeing Programme Board, working in collaboration with Trade Unions have launched new health and wellbeing products to support employees and managers. These are a signpost to information and resources, to enable them to make choices with regards to their own health and wellbeing and that of others:

Our Wellbeing Matters
Manager Wellbeing Matters

NHS Wales is committed to improving arrangements for returning staff to work after illness including the consideration of rapid access and early referral of staff to certain key services; and work is underway to progress this for mental health and musculo-skeletal services.

2.3.1 Physical Wellbeing

A state of physical wellbeing is not just the absence of disease. It includes lifestyle behaviour choices to ensure health, avoid preventable diseases and conditions, and to live in a balanced state of body, mind, and spirit. Promoting good physical health and wellbeing among employees can reduce their levels of sickness, increase energy levels and boost levels of concentration.

Managers should encourage employees to undertake physical activity, take rest breaks, eat meals regularly, keep hydrated throughout the shift, and have opportunities to de-stress through talking to peers.

2.3.2 Mental and Psychological Wellbeing

In NHS Wales 27% of sickness absence is attributable to stress, anxiety and psychological conditions, managers need to be aware of the following key aspects of the work environment, to reduce workplace stressors where possible and ensure that appropriate supports are in place:

- the quality of and fairness of workplace relationships
- the implementation of organisational policies known to support health and wellbeing
- the way in which jobs are designed and work allocated
- the quality and health of the team and how it functions
- the quality and availability of social support
- the availability of information about the psychosocial demands within the workplace, including the range of common stressors
- follow recommendations on how to support employees following unusually

- challenging experiences and incidents
- supporting employees who experience stress resulting from employee relations process i.e. disciplinary, capability, grievance, suspension
- access to specialist support such as those offered by Workforce, the Employee Wellbeing Service and Occupational Health.

Further detail of these aspects can be found in the

*Employee Health and Wellbeing Policy

2.3.3 Environmental and Social Wellbeing recognises that there may be times when employees require additional support in the workplace to maintain a safe working environment. Occupational Health/Health and Safety can advise on managing health related risks, ensuring compliance with HSE guidelines, concerning the following:

- Pregnancy
- Computer/Display Screen Equipment (DSE)
- Manual Handling
- Following diagnosis of a work-related injury and/or health condition

Employees may also require additional support in the form of time away from the workplace to respond to other pressures e.g. those arising from caring responsibilities where a few hours absence may be required whilst an issue is resolved. This is not sickness absence, and both employees and managers should be honest in the categorisation of absence, which is not due to sickness.

A 'borrowing leave' protocol is being developed as an additional approach to support employees when they are unable to utilise other arrangements such as annual leave, purchase additional annual leave, special leave, flexible working etc.

2.3.4 Financial Wellbeing understands the importance of how financial concerns can affect employee mental and physical health, as well as a recognition that, as income providers, we play a vital role in our employees' financial lives.

Stress caused by debt, pay levels, or lack of financial awareness can have a detrimental impact on employee performance.

Employers can play an important role in addressing this challenge. Managers can signpost to financial advice through one of the following resources where they exist in the organisation, if they become aware of financial distress: (add contact details)

- Our Wellbeing Matters
- NWSSP Payroll/Pensions department
- Credit Unions
- Citizens Advice Bureaux
- Money Advice Service - a free and impartial money advice, set up by government
- Trade Unions.

3.0 Policy Scope, Responsibilities and Definitions

3.1 Scope

This policy and its How to Procedures apply to all employees in NHS Wales organisations.

3.2 Responsibility

Sustaining health and wellbeing is considered to be a shared responsibility between the employee and the organisation.

3.2.1 Manager Responsibilities

a) The primary responsibility for the management of attendance rests with managers. The rationale for this approach is that our managers should "know their employees" and be familiar with the issues surrounding the attendance profile and needs of their employees.

b) *The manager in "knowing their employee", has the discretion that when reviewing their health and wellbeing following an episode of sickness absence, they will consider as to whether the employee progresses through the procedure. The decision will be determined and rationale recorded as part of the return to work/informal/formal stage meetings.

c) Managers are responsible for ensuring that employees are aware of the range of health and wellbeing support that is available to them in and out of the workplace. In addition, managers should make employees aware that support or advice may be available through Trade Union representatives if required.

d) Managers must consider the opportunities to return employees to work safely and at the earliest opportunity through the supportive mechanisms such as Phased Return and Temporary Redeployment / and Reasonable / Tailored Adjustments.

e) Managers are responsible for creating an environment, which is conducive to health and wellbeing, and in which a low sickness absence record and regular attendance at work is expected.

f) The manager is responsible for addressing employee sickness absence and managing it in accordance with this policy and associated How to Procedures.

3.2.2 Employee Responsibilities

a) Employees are responsible for their own health and wellbeing.

b) Employees should take up all reasonable opportunities to maximise and protect their own health and wellbeing.

c) Employees should seek medical advice and treatment as soon as possible to support their own health and wellbeing.

d) Employees have a responsibility to attend Occupational Health appointments and sickness absence meetings when requested to do so.

e) Employees can self-refer to available services where they exist, i.e. Occupational Health, Physiotherapy, Employee Wellbeing, where this would be beneficial to their own health and wellbeing.

f) Employees have the responsibility for keeping in touch regularly with their manager when unwell.

g) Employees must consider whether there are any reasonable / tailored adjustments that may help them to remain in work or return to work at the earliest opportunity.

h) Employees have a responsibility to maximise attendance at work in line with their own contract of employment.

i) Employees have a duty to care for and support colleagues in doing the jobs they have agreed to do.

3.2.3 Role of Trade Union Representative

It is the role of Trade Union representatives to:

a) Support the individual member and their organisation in minimising absence from work caused by sickness.

b) Provide their members with advice on all aspects of the policy.

c) Ensure an appropriate Trade Union representative is available at all levels of the procedure should their member wish to be accompanied and to ensure that meetings can occur in a timely manner.

d) Work closely with managers and other groups to make the policy effective at organisational level, including being aware of all relevant legislation.

e) Maintain their competence in the application of the policy and in supporting their member through absence due to sickness.

f) Work with their individual member, the manager and Occupational Health to facilitate a return to work as soon as possible following a period of sickness.

The Minimum Standards for Managing Attendance at Work Policy outlines other responsibilities.

4.0 Definitions and Policy Framework

4.1 Short Term Sickness Absence

- is regarded as any period lasting less than 28 calendar days.

4.2 Long Term Sickness Absence

- is regarded as any continuous period of 28 calendar days or longer.

4.3 Terminal Illness or Condition

- is a disease that cannot be cured or adequately treated and there is a reasonable expectation that the employee will die within a relatively short period of time.

Support for employees with a terminal illness should be given in line with the Welsh TUC 'Dying to work' charter.

Where an employee is diagnosed with a terminal illness or condition, they will be covered by Equality legislation. The absence figures for employees with terminal illness or condition, whilst also forming part of the overall sickness figures, will also be reported separately.

4.4 Planned Sickness Absence - is a health condition that requires an operation or treatment programme which may have a recognised period of expected recovery or duration.

4.5 A Sickness Day - is when an employee becomes unwell and has been unable to undertake their daily hours of work / shift. Where an employee has carried out more than half their daily hours of work / shift, but is unable to complete the day / shift, this day will not count as a sickness day as far as sick pay is concerned. It must, however, be recorded as part of the Return to Work Meeting and may be taken into account when considering any accumulated pattern of sickness.

4.6 Rolling Year - if an episode of sickness occurs the manager should review the twelve-month period preceding the first day of that specific absence.

4.7 Tailored Adjustments - are changes that can help support the health and wellbeing of the employee to remain or return to work at the earliest opportunity. These could include a phased return to work, changes to working start finish times for a short period, changes to some duties, temporary redeployment. Further details are available in the How to Procedure Reasonable / Tailored Adjustments.

4.8 Reasonable Adjustments

Employers are under a legal duty to make reasonable adjustments to ensure workers with disabilities, or physical or mental health impairments, are not put at a substantial disadvantage when doing their jobs.

This would also apply to job candidates at the onset of the employment cycle. Further details are available in the How to Procedure Reasonable / Tailored Adjustments.

4.9 Work Related Absence - when one or more of the absences are related to:

- an industrial injury, incident or accident at work (including psychological harm), which has been reported to the manager as close to the time it occurred as practicable and where an incident report has been completed
- or a serious condition acquired at work and which has been notified to the manager
- Diarrhoea and Vomiting (D&V) or similar infection, which is considered by Infection Control or Occupational Health to be associated with an outbreak in the working environment. Further information is available from the How to Procedure Notification and Certification

These periods of absence should normally be discounted when considering further action under the procedure for the management of frequent short term sickness absence.

Your local injury allowance procedure may be considered in conjunction with the above.

4.10 Pregnancy Related Illness

Where an illness is attributable to pregnancy, sickness absence will not be counted towards the review prompt of the management of sickness absence.

However, any such sickness will be managed in accordance with this policy to facilitate a return to work as soon as possible with any necessary support or adjustment to duties during the pregnancy.

As required, under the management of Health and Safety at Work Regulations 1999, written risk assessments should be undertaken regularly throughout the pregnancy.

Guidance can be obtained through the organisation's maternity policy, and through the HSE publications on New and Expectant Mothers at Work. A referral to Occupational Health for medical advice and support may be required.

If an employee is off sick due to pregnancy related illness on or after the fourth week before the expected week of confinement, their ordinary maternity leave will commence the day after their first completed day of sickness absence.

Where a pregnant employee suffers from non-pregnancy related sickness absence, these absences will count towards the management of sickness absence as usual.

4.11 Notification of Sickness Absence

On the first day an employee is unable to attend work due to sickness, it is their responsibility to report their sickness absence by telephone (or by text phone for employees with a hearing impairment) to their manager or designated deputy (as per their local procedure) as soon as they become aware that they will not be able to attend work. Early notification is particularly important when alternative cover needs to be arranged. This will normally be no later than the normal time of commencement of duty. Further information is available from the How to Procedure Notification and Certification.

4.12 Communication and Maintaining Contact

will ensure that:

- this policy is easily accessible by all members of the organisation
- employees are notified of all changes to this policy.

The employee and their manager must communicate regularly to discuss their progress during the sickness absence, in order to ensure that any necessary additional support and / or expert advice can be sought that may aid a return to work. The frequency of contact will be mutually agreed at the beginning of the absence period and depend on the likely duration of the absence.

Employees must inform their manager on the first day that they regard themselves as being fit for duty whether or not they are due to work that day. Further information is available from the How to Procedure Return to Work.

The following How to Procedures provide the detail on maintaining contact:-

How to Procedure Managing Long Term Sickness Absence

How to Procedure Managing Frequent Short Term Sickness Absence

4.13 Entitlement to Sick Pay

Under the provisions of this policy there may be an entitlement to occupational sick pay. This is set out in the schedule of main terms & conditions of services issued to all employees on commencement of their employment. This does not automatically allow employees to remain in the employment of the organisation until the occupational sick pay is exhausted.

Sick pay is not normally payable for an absence caused by an accident due to active participation in sport as a profession or where contributory negligence is proved, in accordance with the NHS Terms and Conditions Handbook.

4.14 Medical Appointments

recognises that employees will need to make occasional visits to a dentist, GP or other health professional or may be required to attend a hospital or clinic for investigation and/or treatment. Wherever it is possible to do so, employees (both full and part time) must endeavour to arrange such appointments at a time that they are not scheduled to work or, if this is not possible, as near to the beginning or end of the working period as possible so as to minimise the absence from work and disruption to the service. Employees should not be refused permission to attend a pre-arranged appointment as long as reasonable notice has been given.

The manager must keep a record of any such appointments and must ask to see documentary confirmation of the appointment where this is available.

Where employees need to attend routine appointments (with GPs, Dentists, blood tests or hospital checkups) during work time, they will be required to make up the time taken at the earliest opportunity. Employees must discuss and agree with their manager how this will be achieved. The following are options that can be agreed:

- arriving earlier or leaving later on the day of the appointment
- a temporary increase in hours over a short period
- unpaid leave
- annual leave
- time in lieu
- any other arrangement agreed with the manager.

Where a medical appointment involves treatment which results in an employee being unfit for work afterwards, the period of absence will be recorded as sick.

Where such appointments form part of an ongoing treatment programme for a serious health condition, or are related to a disability or long term health condition, or are for a work related disease or injury, the manager must discuss such appointments with the employee to plan any necessary support to be offered. Reasonable time off to attend such appointments as part of their programme of care and support will be given full consideration.

4.15 Occupational Health

In addition to the normal medical care provided by their dentist, GP or other health professionals an employee may be required to attend an assessment with Occupational Health when asked to do so. Time taken to attend such appointments will not be required to be worked back. Where employees are not currently in work due to sickness absence every reasonable effort must be made to attend Occupational Health appointments. Other sources of medical advice will be arranged as necessary by Occupational Health. Further information is available from the How to Procedure Occupational Health.

4.16 Rights of Accompaniment

Employees requested to attend a formal meeting relating to their sickness under this policy will have the right to be accompanied by an official of a recognised Trade Union or employees organisation or a work colleague, if they so wish.

In certain circumstances, employees will be able to request in advance a manager / supervisor of a preferred gender to carry out interviews under the procedure and this will be respected wherever it is practicable.

It is not considered necessary for the employee to be accompanied at informal meetings.

However, if requests to be accompanied by an official of a recognised Trade Union or employees organisation or by a workplace colleague, are made, the manager should not unreasonably refuse this request.

5.0 Policy Framework and how to use it - How to Procedures

This section of the policy highlights the procedures relating to the management of sickness and sickness related absence. It is particularly important that concerns regarding attendance and health and wellbeing are discussed and addressed at an early stage. Managers should discuss any concerns with their employee and fully consider everything that is relevant and respond appropriately.

Full details can be found in the following How to Procedures:

- Notification and Certification of Sickness Absence
- Managing Frequent Short Term Sickness Absence
- Managing Long Term Sickness Absence
- Occupational Health
- Return to Work
- Phased Return and Temporary Redeployment
- Reasonable / Tailored Adjustments.

6.0 Premature Retirement on Ill Health Grounds

There are two tiers of ill health retirement:

Tier 1 - This is where an individual is unable to undertake their current job due to permanent ill health. In this case the employee's pension is based on accrued membership without reduction.

Tier 2 - This applies where an individual is unable to carry out regular employment due to permanent ill health. The employee's pension is based on accrued membership without reduction PLUS an enhancement of two-thirds of their prospective membership to normal retirement age.

6.1 It may be possible to move between the tiers after retirement where the medical advisers indicate a condition may meet Tier 2 requirements within 3 years of retiring or if the condition is such that it is not possible to determine at the outset whether the employee will recover sufficiently to undertake any regular work.

6.2 It is the employee's responsibility to apply for ill health retirement pension benefits.

6.2.1 In all cases where the employee may be eligible, via appropriate membership of the NHS pension scheme, the potential for application for premature retirement on the grounds of ill health should be discussed with the employee.

6.2.2 The employee must be made aware that the decision to terminate employment is not linked to or subject to ill health retirement and the decision on such retirement lies with the NHS Pension Agency and not:

6.2.3 The ending of employment will not necessarily be delayed in order for a pension application to be made and processed. It is therefore important that employees do not delay making a pension application once appropriate medical advice has been received and/or the decision to terminate employment is made.

6.2.4 The relevant section of Form AW33 should normally be completed by the employee's general practitioner, or a medical specialist.

7.0 Help and advice

Help and advice regarding the detail relating to the application and interpretation of this policy is available within the How to Procedures. Further advice can be sought from Workforce, recognised Trade Unions and employee organisations.

8.0 Review of policy

This policy will be subject to regular review at a frequency determined by the Welsh Partnership Forum.

02

How to Procedure Notification and Certification

2 How to Procedure - Notification and Certification

How To Procedure - Notification and Certification (includes workplace injury / illness and annual leave during sickness absence)

This How to Procedure provides the necessary information for both managers and employees and must be followed for reporting and notification of sickness absence.

Wherever there is reference to the number of days, this means calendar days whether or not the employee would be expected to work on that day.

Initial day of absence and within 48 hours

It is the responsibility of the employee to report their sickness absence by telephone (or by text phone for employees with a hearing impairment) to their manager or designated deputy as soon as they become aware that they will not be able to attend work. Early notification is particularly important when alternative cover needs to be arranged. This will normally be no later than the normal time of commencement of duty. If an employee calls in late and / or without a satisfactory reason, their absence may be counted as unauthorised and considered as unpaid.

The employee must notify their manager themselves as above when they are unable to attend work due to sickness. Where in exceptional circumstances, this is not practicable a third party may notify on their behalf.

However, it is the employee's responsibility to ensure that this is done appropriately in accordance with the Departmental requirements for notification. Where the manager is unable to take the call personally he/she will ring the employee back as soon as is practicable.

During contact with the manager (or designated deputy in the manager's absence), the employee will be expected to advise them of the following:

- The first day of sickness.
- The reason for the absence.
- The likely duration of the illness and anticipated date / day of return or when they will be able to advise of the likely duration of the illness and anticipated date / day of return.
- Any intention of the individual to visit / contact their GP / Occupational Health and Wellbeing service.
- The next contact date if a date of return cannot be given.
- Confirmation of their telephone number and contact details for the duration of their period of sickness absence.

During the discussion with the employee, the manager should consider whether sick leave is the appropriate category for leave and whether in the circumstances a different category of leave should be applied i.e. special leave.

Where appropriate the manager should also consider any reasonable / tailored adjustments that could be made that would enable the employee to continue to work rather than having to take sick leave, full details are available in the How to Procedure Reasonable / Tailored Adjustments.

Additionally the manager should also consider whether an appointment should be made to any Occupational Health or Wellbeing services that are available which may assist the employee in their recovery. Full details are available in the How to Procedure Occupational Health.

All sickness absences must be recorded as soon as practicable via the agreed organisational process.

Fit Note Certificates

For any period of sickness absence between 1–7 calendar days an employee must complete a self-certification form unless already certified by a Fit Note or hospital certificate.

Employees must submit doctors Fit Note certificates for sickness absence from the 8th calendar day of sickness absence onwards. Ongoing medical certificates must be sent to the manager within 3 days, from the date of the expiry of the previous Fit Note. If this is not possible, the employee should telephone the manager to inform them of the situation. The organisation is not obliged to accept backdated Fit Notes and any gaps may be considered as unauthorised absence and therefore occupational sick pay will be withheld.

Hospital Certificates

When an employee is hospitalised, the hospital will provide certificates confirming that the employee is expected to be an inpatient for a certain period of time. Such certificates should be submitted to the manager in the normal way.

Employees are not required to provide additional self-certificates or Fit Notes from their GP when they are covered by a hospital certificate.

Planned Long Term Sickness Absence

Sickness absence can be planned where it is known that the employee will be undertaking a programme of clinical treatment that will be debilitating for a recognised period of time, for example, to undertake an operation or chemotherapy.

The manager and employee will meet prior to the absence and discuss the following:

- The likely period of time the employee will be absent;
- Agreed dates and times for maintaining regular contact, to update each other on work and progress of recovery;
- Agreed date and time for a formal meeting to start to plan a return to work;
- Any other issue of concern for either party;
- A mutually agreed plan must be drawn up and a copy kept by both parties;
- Support in the drawing up of this plan can be obtained from Occupational Health.

Undertaking other work whilst absent

Once reported as absent due to sickness, an employee should not undertake other work including, self-employment, without the prior written consent of the manager. Failure to do so may be considered as breach of contract and subject to disciplinary action, which may result in the involvement of the counter fraud department and / or dismissal. Such action will only be taken following advice from Workforce.

Medical exclusion following infectious / notifiable disease

Where the absence is the result of diarrhoea and vomiting or other relevant notifiable infectious disease and whilst the employee is suffering from the effects of the disease, the absence will be recorded as a period of sickness in the usual way and count towards review prompts.

The manager must obtain information regarding the nature of the illness and obtain advice, if necessary, from Occupational Health / Infection Control as to whether a period of further exclusion is required after the symptoms have subsided and the period of sickness has ended.

Where the advice requires the employee, for purposes of infection control to remain off work, this subsequent period will be regarded as medical exclusion with pay and not be recorded as sickness absence and will not count toward policy review prompts.

Occupational Health / Infection Control may require the employee to provide a specimen for microbiological examination in line with the Infection Control Policy.

Medical Suspension

When an employee is deemed unfit to work by their manager, due to reasons of ill health, the manager has the right to enforce a short term period of absence for no longer than 7 days in which time an employee must seek advice from their GP regarding their fitness to work. This absence will be counted as suspension from duty with pay for medical reasons. A risk assessment needs to be completed by the manager and advice sought from Workforce and Occupational Health.

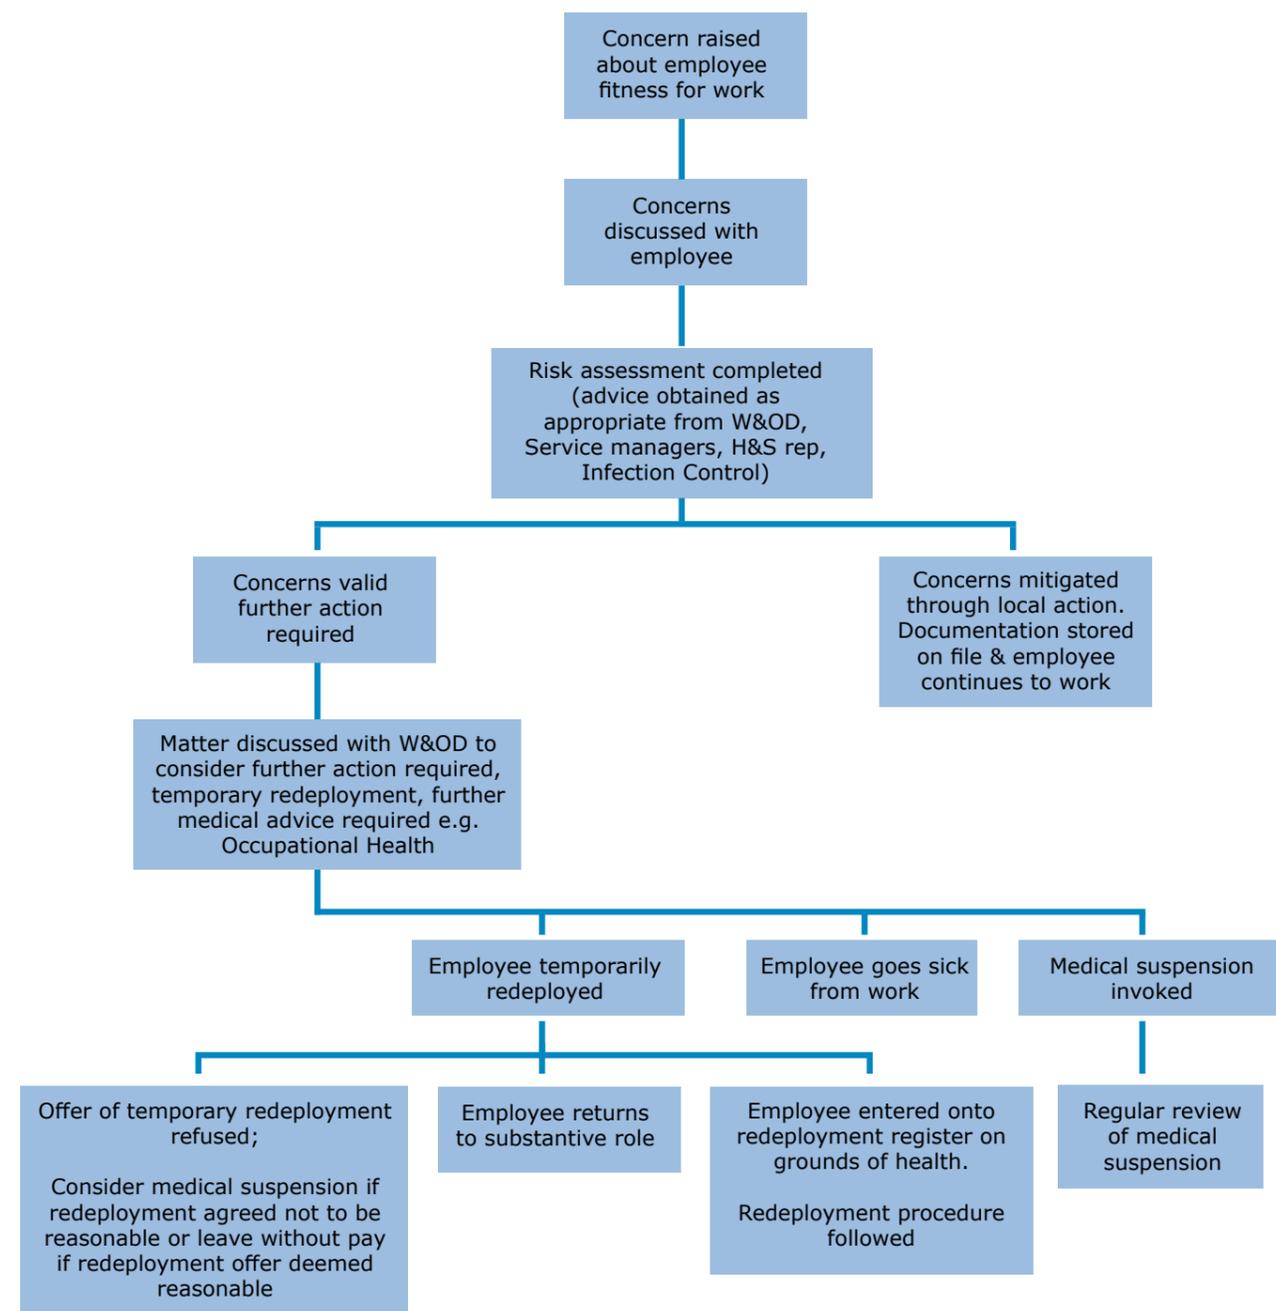

Where

can demonstrate that the employee has refused a reasonable offer of alternative employment as an alternative to medical suspension, the employee will not receive pay for the period of medical suspension.

Where the employee's GP advice conflicts with that of Occupational Health will rely on its Occupational Health department's advice following discussions between the GP and Occupational Health.

The flowchart outlines how this process should flow:

Accidents involving a third party

In cases where employees are absent from work as a result of an injury sustained wholly or partly as a result of the actions of a third party against whom the employee has made a claim, any payments made to the employee by the organisation will be recoverable. The employee must notify the fact that they are making a claim to their manager at the commencement of the absence, or as soon as practicable. The manager should notify Payroll of this fact. Where an employee is unable to notify their manager personally because of, for example, serious injury, notification may be undertaken by another party.

Sickness during period of annual leave

When an employee falls sick during annual leave they will be required to report that illness in line with normal notification procedures and produce a Fit Note covering the period from the first day of sickness.

Where an employee's sickness absence falls on a Bank Holiday (which wasn't a rostered work day and booked as leave), there is no entitlement to an additional day off.

In order to allow annual leave to be reinstated a satisfactory Fit Note must be received within 3 working days of the beginning of the illness (unless abroad). In such cases the employee will be deemed to have been on sickness absence rather than annual leave from the date of the certificate. (this includes leave booked that falls on a Bank Holiday).

Only in exceptional cases will a foreign medical certificate of more than one month be accepted for payment purposes. A UK Fit Note should be obtained on return to the country.

Annual leave / holidays during a period of sickness absence

All employees are expected to take their annual leave entitlement during the leave year and should not normally carry over annual leave. However, employees on long term sickness absence must be given the opportunity to take annual leave during their sickness absence period.

The employee does not need to be signed fit to work during this period. Their records will continue to show as a continuous period of sickness absence and will be treated as one episode. Managers must notify Payroll of an employee's intention to take annual leave during a period of sickness absence.

Where employees are in receipt of a reduced level of occupational sick pay and / or Statutory Sick Pay, the salary will be 'topped up' to the value of the contractual occupational full pay.

An employee is likely to take paid annual leave at the same time as sickness absence if:

- the employee has been on sickness absence for a considerable period and sick pay has reduced
- the employee has been on long term sickness absence and sick pay has ceased.

At no point, can any combination of annual leave pay, occupational sick pay and statutory sick pay exceed the normal full pay entitlement.

During a period of sickness absence employees are expected to be available to attend meetings /appointments in relation to their absence and consequently if they go away on holiday (either abroad or in the UK) they will be expected to obtain permission from their manager. This will be taken as annual leave.

Accrual / carry-over of annual leave

All employees are expected to take their annual leave entitlement during the leave year and should not normally carry over annual leave. Where staff are returning from long term sickness absence they should be expected to take any outstanding leave within the current leave year. This should be managed carefully taking account of the needs of the service and the practicalities of them being able to use up all of their entitlement in that leave year. Any annual leave accrued at the time of the return to work may also be taken, by agreement with the manager to allow the employee a more gradual return to work.

During an employee's sickness absence, annual leave continues to accrue. Every effort must be made to utilise the annual leave whilst absent as explained above. However, if the accrued annual leave spans over two or more leave years and the leave has not been utilised the employee may carry over to the new leave year. This annual leave is based on the statutory entitlement and not contractual. Therefore, the statutory entitlement of annual leave per annum is 20 days if working full time, and pro rata for part time staff.

3 How to Procedure Managing Frequent Short Term Sickness Absences

How to Procedure Managing Frequent Short Term Sickness Absences

The key purpose of this How to Procedure is to support the employee's attendance at work. Managers are required to proactively manage absence where the pattern or frequency of absence gives rise to concern, both for the health and wellbeing of the employee and the provision of service.

1. Management support for frequent short term absence

1.1 Initial day of absence and within 48 hours

It is the responsibility of the employee to report their sickness absence by telephone (or by text phone for employees with a hearing impairment) to their manager or designated deputy as soon as they become aware that they will not be able to attend work.

Managers must make contact with the employee to ascertain the reason for the absence in circumstances where the employee has reported sick to someone other than them. Further information is available from the How to Procedure Notification and Certification.

1.2 Within first seven days of absence

Evidence suggests that if someone is off sick for more than seven days, the absence is more likely to become prolonged. Managers should maintain contact with the employee during this time and consider all the support that may be appropriate to offer, including options to available to assist with a return to work.

Further information is available from the How to Procedures:

- Return to Work
- Phased Return and Temporary Redeployment
- Reasonable / Tailored Adjustments.

2. Managing frequent short term sickness absences

2.1 Frequent short term Review Prompts

Following a period of sickness absence a return to work meeting will take place with the manager and the employee where the below reviews prompts will be considered and if met, when previous absences are taken into account, further management support may be required at the manager's *discretion. Managers may want to consider a number of factors e.g. the employee's previous sickness record, the nature of the absence etc. Further information is available from the How to Procedure Return to Work.

- three episodes of sickness absence of any length in any rolling 6-month period
- two or more absences totalling 10 calendar days or more in a rolling 12-month period
- recognisable patterns of absence, including any in previous years, which cause concern but may not meet other review prompts.

These review prompts include any episodes of short or long term sickness absence which occur within the rolling period.

The definition of the rolling period is the 6-month or 12-month period counted back from the first day of the episode of sickness being looked at.

There are specific absences that should be discounted for the purposes of review prompts in relation to work related absences and pregnancy related illness. Further information is available from the How To Procedure Certification and Notification.

3. Supporting attendance at work

3.1 Stages

The following stages are to be followed when managing frequent absences: informal discussion; first formal stage; second formal stage; and third / final formal stage. At each stage a meeting is held with the manager and the employee. Refer to Appendix 1.

*The manager in “knowing their employee”, has the discretion that when reviewing their health and wellbeing following an episode of sickness absence, they will consider as to whether the employee progresses through the procedure. The decision will be determined and rationale recorded as part of the return to work / informal / formal stage meetings.

3.2 Meetings

3.2.1 Employee attendance

Employees must attend informal discussion and formal sickness meetings as requested by their manager. There is no notice requirement of attendance at return to work meetings or informal discussions, and if appropriate can be a combined meeting.

A minimum of seven calendar days’ notice in writing will be given for attendance at formal meetings.

If the employee is not able to attend the scheduled date, the manager will arrange one further meeting taking into account the reason for the non-attendance.

Following this, if the employee fails to attend the rearranged meeting without good reason, the manager may hold the meeting in their absence (taking due consideration to all circumstances) and make a decision about the situation based on the evidence they have at hand, which may result in further action being instigated under the policy.

The unavailability of an employee’s preferred representative should not delay sickness meetings taking place, as long as a suitable alternative representative is available.

3.2.2 Right to be accompanied

Employees requested to attend a formal meeting relating to their sickness under this policy will have the right to be accompanied by an official of a recognised Trade Union or employees organisation or a work colleague, if they so wish.

In certain circumstances, employees will be able to request in advance a manager/ supervisor of the preferred same gender to carry out interviews under the procedure and this will be respected wherever it is practicable.

It is not considered necessary for the employee to be accompanied at informal meetings, however, if requests to be accompanied by an official of a recognised Trade Union or employees organisation or by a workplace colleague, are made, the manager should not unreasonably refuse this request.

3.3 Purpose of meetings

The meetings, both informal and formal, are an opportunity for the manager and employee to explore the circumstances of the employee’s sickness absence record. The discussions will be supportive, handled with sensitivity and in confidence. It is an important opportunity for the employee to raise any matters which they feel may be causing or exacerbating their sickness whether this is work related or not.

The manager should consider the following during the meetings:

- frequency and pattern of sickness absence review prompts
- the nature and cause of the sickness absence
- the attendance record of the employee
- the content and outcome of the informal discussion and previous formal sickness meetings
- what opportunity has been given to improve health and wellbeing and attendance at work
- Reasonable / Tailored Adjustments that have been considered and / or introduced
- referral to Occupational Health
- all medical advice available
- whether there is a diagnosis of an underlying medical condition
- the likelihood of improvement in the foreseeable future
- redeployment which could prevent further absence as a short term measure
- impact on service continuity and delivery including sickness targets.

3.4 Setting levels of improvement – Review Period

It is important that the employee understands the level of improvement required and this must be explained at the meeting. The definition of the review period is 12 months running forward from the last date of the most recent episode of sickness that occurred before the sickness review meeting. It is the time period within which a further review prompt is met (which can be established by looking at the rolling period) may lead to escalation through the stages of the policy.

The review period may be paused if an employee is absent from work for a period in excess of 28 days, to cover the period where sickness absence cannot be monitored. The review prompts set out in Section 2.1 are used to measure improvement.

Thus, where no review prompt is met during the review period this will be regarded as an appropriate level of improvement. However, where a review prompt is met this will be regarded as an unacceptable level of improvement and a further meeting may be held.

The manager should arrange for review meetings to be undertaken every three months at each of the stages.

3.5 Overtime / Bank Working

Where the manager feels that continuing to work overtime or bank working, in addition to their contractual hours, may be contributing to an employee’s sickness absence, managers can restrict employees from undertaking additional work / shifts following sickness.

To support an employee to regain their full health capacity when returning to work after a period of long term sickness, the manager may feel that continuing to work overtime or bank working, in addition to their contractual hours, may be impacting on their recovery. The manager may therefore suggest restricting the employee from undertaking these additional shifts / hours for a set period of time. In this situation and only where the employee does not agree with the manager’s assessment, advice from Occupational Health should be sought regarding restricting employees from undertaking additional work / shifts for a temporary period following sickness.

3.6 Informal Discussion

This meeting will be between an appropriate manager and the employee only and as it is informal there is no requirement for a member of Workforce to be involved.

If there are no further review prompts met within the 12-month review period, then there will be no escalation, a meeting will take place, acknowledging the improvement and the employee will no longer be reviewed under the procedure.

If they meet a further review prompt within the review period the manager will apply *discretion on whether to move to the next stage. This discussion should be documented and shared with the employee. It may also be helpful to give the employee a copy of Appendix 1 for clarification.

3.7 Formal Sickness Meetings

If the employee's absence has met a review prompt, the manager will consider *discretion and make a decision whether to hold a First Formal Sickness meeting, it will be appropriate for the employee to be informed that they are now on the First Formal Stage of the procedure and a 12-month review period will be set. The employee must be informed that if a further review prompt is met during this review period, the manager will consider *discretion and make a decision regarding whether they should be asked to attend a Second Formal Meeting.

Where the manager decides not to place the employee on the next stage of the procedure the employee will be reminded of their personal responsibility to maintain attendance at work; their individual sickness record and sickness review prompts. The manager must also record on the personal file the rationale for applying discretion and their decision not to move through the procedure.

At the formal meetings, a member of Workforce may be in attendance, if required. However, a member of Workforce must be in attendance at the Third / Final Formal Meeting. The information given at each of the meetings must be confirmed in writing to the employee and retained on the personal file.

Where one or more of the review prompts are met whilst on the Second Formal Stage, the manager will apply *discretion and make a decision whether to hold a Third / Final Formal Sickness meeting.

3.8 Third / Final Formal Sickness Meeting

If a further review prompt is met then it may be appropriate for the case to be referred to a senior manager with the authority to dismiss so they can make a decision on the employee's continued employment. In this circumstance it is essential that the following factors be fully considered in reaching this decision:

- the overall attendance record of the employee
- the appropriateness and fairness of the previous stages applied
- any other meetings / counselling sessions undertaken
- the medical advice (where available) and whether any underlying condition has been identified
- what opportunity has been given to improve health and wellbeing and attendance at work
- the likelihood of improvement in the foreseeable future
- the needs of the service and difficulties caused by the absence
- any alternative action considered / offered including reasonable adjustments / tailored adjustments, permanent or temporary reduction in hours, redesign or modification of duties, redeployment or ill health retirement.

An appropriate member of Workforce must be in attendance at the Third / Final Formal Meeting.

A written summary of the position to date must be given to the employee, seven calendar days in advance of the meeting, setting out the reasons why dismissal is being considered. It should be clear that much of this will have been addressed much earlier in the process and if the employee has reached this stage of the procedure it is only after a full and thorough review of all these matters has been undertaken.

Termination of employment cannot be considered unless the employee has been informed in writing that their absence may lead ultimately to dismissal.

Employees must be advised of their right to appeal.

A decision to terminate employment must not be made without medical advice from Occupational Health or other specialist, unless the lack of such advice is caused by failure to attend Occupational Health appointments or other specialist medical appointments.

The employee should, in these circumstances, be advised that failure to attend may result in limited information being available to the manager, which may influence the decision made to the detriment of the employee.

Where, following full consideration of the circumstances, the manager decides that termination is not appropriate, the manager may decide to put in place a further 12-month review period, dated from the last day of the last episode that prompted the meeting.

4. Appeals Process

Appeals against dismissal under the policy should be directed to the Director of Workforce and OD within 14 calendar days of the confirmation of dismissal being received. The notification of intention to appeal should set out the grounds on which the appeal is based.

The appeal must be heard, whenever possible, within 28 calendar days of receipt of the notification.

The Appeal Officer will be a senior manager nominated by the Director of Workforce and OD, in line with the organisation's scheme of delegated authority, and must not have been involved in the sickness review procedure at an earlier point.

A member of Workforce will be in attendance to support and give advice to the Appeal Officer.

The manager who made the decision to dismiss will be in attendance to present their decision at the Appeal Hearing.

The Appeal Hearing will consider whether the decision to dismiss was fair and reasonable at the time that the action was taken.

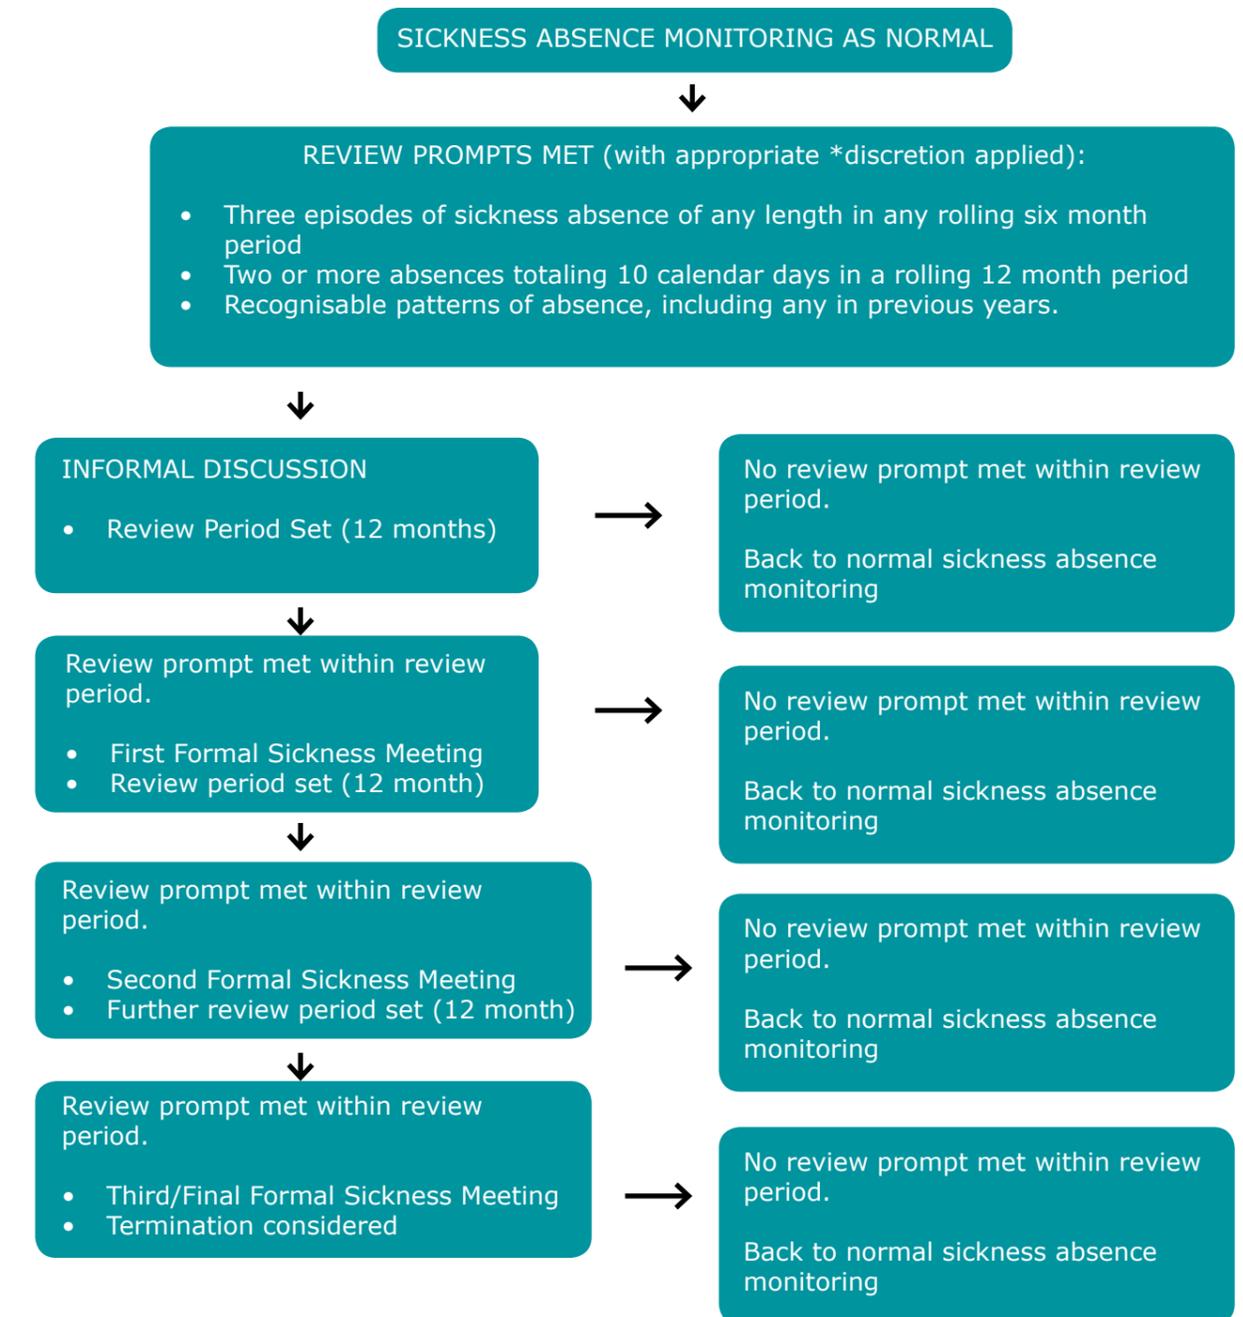

The Appeal Hearing will:

- give the employee, or their representative, an opportunity to expand the details contained within their appeal letter
- give the Appeal Officer an opportunity to ask questions of those present to clarify the nature of the appeal
- if present, give the manager who made the decision to dismiss, the opportunity to make a statement about their decision and the process adopted, and be questioned about it as necessary
- give the employee, or their representative, an opportunity to sum up the grounds for the appeal.

When a decision is reached by the Appeal Officer, the decision must be confirmed in writing within seven calendar days. This exhausts all procedures within the organisation.

Appendix 1

FREQUENT SHORT TERM SICKNESS ABSENCE FLOWCHART

The review period is 12 months from the last day of the period of sickness that prompted the meeting.

A rolling period means that when an episode of sickness occurs, the manager must look back from the first day of the absence for a period of 12 months to establish if the employee has met a review prompt.

04

How to Procedure Managing Long Term Sickness Absence

How to Procedure Managing Long Term Sickness Absence

The key purpose of this How to Procedure is to support employee's attendance at work and ensure any health conditions are effectively managed. The manager should look at options and practical ways to support absent employees to return to work, giving due consideration to both the wellbeing of the employee and the provision of service.

Employees absent due to long term sickness, will need help and support during their recovery and their return to work. An understanding and sensitive approach should be taken by the manager in all cases.

Help and advice regarding the procedure is available from Workforce, recognised Trade Unions and employee organisations.

Managers should at the earliest opportunity proactively and positively manage long term sickness, with the primary aim of supporting the employee and facilitating a return to work as soon as possible.

*The manager in "knowing their employee", has the discretion that when reviewing their health and wellbeing following an episode of sickness absence, they will consider as to whether the employee progresses through the procedure. The decision will be determined and rationale recorded as part of the return to work / informal / formal stage meetings.

Throughout this process consideration needs to be given to any reasonable / tailored adjustments that may facilitate the employee returning to work. Before any management intervention, the manager must consider whether the employee's attendance record is directly attributable to a disability. Further information is available in the How to Procedure Reasonable / Tailored Adjustments.

1. Communication and Maintaining Contact

Regular contact allows the manager to keep track of the employee's recovery and progress and will also provide an important connection for the employee back to the world of work.

The aim of regular contact is to support the employee whilst they are absent and to facilitate the employee's return to work. Regular contact will also allow the manager to manage the employee's workload in their absence.

Managers should keep in touch and agree with the employee when and how frequent telephone or face-to-face catch ups should be and in what format. Arrangements for such contact should be agreed when the sickness is first reported and kept under review.

Weekly contact is usual within the first 28 calendar days, thereafter this frequency may change, i.e. when a Fit Note is extended or when interventions have taken place that could lead to improvement or a return to work.

It is expected that this contact will be two-way and that the employee will keep in touch to ensure that the manager is regularly updated on their condition / progress.

It is recognised that, for some employees, returning to work after a prolonged period of absence can be difficult. It is expected that managers will proactively and positively manage long term sickness so as to be able to offer appropriate help and support.

It is important that the manager maintains a written record of the date and content of any communications.

There may be circumstances where it may be detrimental and difficult for the manager to attempt to contact the employee. In such cases advice should be sought from the Workforce and/or Occupational Health.

2. Long Term Sickness Meetings

During the employee's long term sickness absence, it will be necessary to arrange long term sickness meetings. Where appropriate, the meeting should ideally be held no later than the 28th day of absence.

This meeting is an opportunity for the manager and employee to explore the circumstances of the employee's sickness absence record. The discussions will be supportive, handled with sensitivity and in confidence. It is an important opportunity for the employee to raise any matters which they feel may be causing or exacerbating their sickness whether this is work related or not.

Timescales for holding each long term sickness meeting will depend on individual circumstances and some sickness absence issues may be dealt with over a longer or shorter period than others.

Prior to holding, the employee should be written to, giving seven calendar days' notice, and invited to attend a long term sickness meeting to discuss their ongoing sickness absence.

In this letter, they should be notified of their entitlement to accompaniment. A Workforce representative may attend this meeting.

The employee should also be advised that their continued absence may lead ultimately to dismissal.

Permanent redeployment and ill health retirement options should formally be explored and agreed at a long term sickness meeting, if a return to their role or previous full duties is not possible.

Termination of employment may only be considered and agreed at a third / final formal meeting.

The main points discussed at the long term sickness meeting, including any further action to be taken, must be noted.

The manager should confirm to the employee in writing the outcome and main points of the long term sickness meetings.

2.1 Employee attendance

Employees must attend long term sickness meetings as requested by their manager.

A minimum of seven calendar days' notice in writing will be given for attendance at long term sickness meetings.

If the employee is not able to attend the scheduled date, the manager will arrange one further meeting taking into account the reason for the non-attendance. Following this, if the employee fails to attend the rearranged meeting without good reason the manager may hold the meeting in their absence (taking due consideration to all circumstances) and make a decision about the situation based on the evidence they have at hand, which may result in further action being instigated under the policy.

2.2 Right to be accompanied

Employees requested to attend a long term sickness meeting will have the right to be accompanied by an official of a recognised Trade Union or employees organisation or a work colleague, if they so wish.

In certain circumstances, employees will be able to request in advance a manager/supervisor of a preferred gender to carry out meetings under the procedure and this will be respected wherever it is practicable.

2.3 Meeting content

The discussion may cover the following issues (as appropriate to the particular case):

- any relevant work updates that have occurred in the employee's absence
- the nature and cause of the employee's sickness absence
- progress towards their recovery
- the prospect of a return to work in the foreseeable future
- the outcome of any previous sickness meetings during this period of absence
- any updated medical advice provided to the employee (or need for further advice)
- whether there is a diagnosis of an underlying medical condition
- the expiry of the employee's current / last Fit Note
- referral to Occupational Health.
- any phased return, reasonable / tailored adjustments and/or redeployment, that have been considered and / or could be introduced that may facilitate a return to work, including any barriers to these
- if there is a need for any other support or assistance
- consideration to Premature Retirement on Ill Health Grounds (Occupational Health or Workforce advice required)
- annual leave

- impact on service continuity and delivery including sickness targets
- the frequency and arrangements for regular contact (including any concerns)
- agree future long term sickness meetings
- the employee should also be advised that their continued absence may lead ultimately to dismissal
- the employee must be made aware that the manager's decision to terminate employment is not linked to or subject to ill health retirement.

The ending of employment will not be delayed in order for a pension application to be made and processed.

3. Occupational Health

The absent employee may benefit from a referral to Occupational Health for an assessment of the effects of the illness or condition, the likely duration of the absence and whether or not there are any steps that the manager could take to facilitate the employee's return to work.

An employee does not need to be referred to Occupational Health before they can return to work. However, for more complex cases, you may wish to obtain advice to discuss the need for a phased return to work, varied duties / hours, redeployment or any other reasonable / tailored adjustments.

An Occupational Health referral must be obtained, before considering termination of employment (unless the employee has refused or failed to attend the Occupational Health appointment). Workforce can support management with advice on this.

Arrangements for implementing a referral to Occupational Health are covered in the How to Procedure Occupational Health.

4. Therapeutic Return / Reorientation

A therapeutic return can be a helpful way to enable employees that have been away from work to re-connect with colleagues in advance of a formal return to work. It may involve attending work for a meeting with the manager / team in order to keep up to date with what has been happening and overcome any initial anxieties about returning to work.

The employee is still considered to be off sick whilst completing a therapeutic return. It is important to ensure the therapeutic return is limited to a small number of hours. No undue pressure or responsibility is applied to the employee during this period. It is expected that a therapeutic return is followed by a structured phased return to work.

To support an employee to regain their full health capacity when returning to work after a period of long term sickness, the manager may feel that continuing to work overtime or bank working, in addition to their contractual hours, may be impacting on their recovery. The manager may therefore suggest restricting the employee from undertaking these additional shifts / hours for a set period of time. In this situation and only where the employee does not agree with the manager's assessment, advice from Occupational Health should be sought regarding restricting employees from undertaking additional work / shifts for a temporary period following sickness.

5. Termination of Employment

Termination of employment will only be considered when all options have been explored:

- a return to work in any capacity is unlikely in light of the medical evidence

- a return to work is not forth-coming despite medical advice that a return is possible
- redeployment
- there are no reasonable / tailored adjustments that would facilitate a return to work
- there is no prospect of suitable alternative work becoming available.

The case will be referred to a senior manager with the authority to dismiss so they can make a decision on the employee's continued employment. In this circumstance, it is essential that the following factors be fully considered in reaching this decision:

- the overall attendance record
- all communication and contact with and by the employee during their absence
- the content and outcome of any formal or informal meetings
- medical opinion (unless this is not available due to the lack of co-operation of the employee)
- the likelihood of returning to work (with or without reasonable adjustments)
- reasonable / tailored adjustments to the original post
- redeployment to an alternative post
- redesign or modification of duties (where possible)
- if the employee is permanently incapable of a return to this post, Premature Retirement on Ill Health Grounds
- any other relevant issues raised by the employee and/or their representative
- the needs of the service and for the work to be done.

Where termination of employment is being considered at a third / final meeting, an appropriate member of Workforce must be in attendance.

A written summary of the position to date must be given to the employee, seven calendar days in advance of the meeting, setting out the reasons why dismissal is being considered. It should be clear that much of this will have been addressed much earlier in the procedure and if the employee has reached this stage, it is only after a full and thorough review of all these matters have been undertaken.

Termination of employment cannot be considered unless the employee has been informed in writing that their absence may lead to termination of employment.

A decision to terminate employment will not be taken without up to date medical advice (within the previous three months), unless the lack of such advice is caused by failure to attend appointments or failure on the part of the employee to allow access to relevant medical reports. The employee should, in these circumstances, have been advised that failure to attend or allow access to their medical records may be to their detriment, and result in less information being made available to the manager to make their decision.

Where following full consideration of the circumstances, the manager decides that termination of employment is not appropriate, the manager may decide to put in place a further 12-month review period.

A decision to terminate employment will be confirmed in writing and shall be on the grounds of capability. This shall be the responsibility of the manager with the authority to terminate the employment of the employee concerned.

Any decision to terminate employment should not be based on sick pay entitlement and may occur prior to expiry of such pay in appropriate circumstances.

Equally, where sick pay entitlement has expired, this will not automatically lead to termination of employment, as this will depend on the circumstances of the particular case.

Notice of termination of employment shall be given in accordance with statutory / contractual provisions, paid notice or payment in lieu of notice, whichever is the more appropriate.

If termination of employee is on the grounds of ill health, they must receive payment for accrued but untaken annual leave for the current leave year plus any previously accrued but untaken statutory annual leave.

5.1 Authority to dismiss

The decision to terminate will be made by the manager with the authority to terminate the employee's employment, in accordance with the organisations scheme of delegation.

5.2 Appeals Process

Appeals against dismissal under the policy should be directed to the Director of Workforce and OD within 14 calendar days of the confirmation of dismissal being received. The notification of intention to appeal should set out the grounds on which the appeal is based. The appeal must be heard, whenever possible, within 28 calendar days of receipt of the notification.

The Appeal Officer will be a senior manager nominated by the Director of Workforce and OD, in line with the organisation's scheme of delegated authority, and must not have been involved in the sickness review procedure at an earlier point.

A member of Workforce will be in attendance to support and give advice to the Appeal Officer.

The manager who made the decision to dismiss will be in attendance to present their decision at the Appeal Hearing.

The Appeal Hearing will consider whether the decision to dismiss was fair and reasonable at the time that the action was taken.

The Appeal Hearing will:

- give the employee, or their representative, an opportunity to expand the details contained within their appeal letter
- give the Appeal Officer an opportunity to ask questions of those present to clarify the nature of the appeal
- if present, give the manager who made the decision to dismiss the opportunity to make a statement about their decision and the process adopted, and be questioned about it as necessary
- give the employee, or their representative, an opportunity to sum up the grounds for the appeal.

When a decision is reached by the Appeal Officer, the decision must be confirmed in writing within seven calendar days. This exhausts all procedures within the organisation.

Appendix A

Equality Act 2010

The Equality Act 2010 came into force on 1st October 2010. The Act brings together a number of existing anti-discrimination laws and introduces changes that give individuals greater protection from unfair discrimination. It sets out the characteristics that are protected by law and the behaviour that is unlawful. The protected characteristics are (in alphabetical order):

- Age
- Disability
- Gender reassignment
- Marriage and civil partnership
- Pregnancy and maternity
- Race
- Religion and belief
- Sex
- Sexual orientation

Under the Act people are not allowed to discriminate, harass or victimise another person because they have any of the protected characteristics. There is also protection where someone is perceived to have one of the protected characteristics or where they are associated with someone who has a protected characteristic. The Act changes and extends certain concepts and definitions and recognises six forms of discrimination: direct; indirect; discrimination by perception; discrimination by association; harassment and victimisation.

The Equality Act 2010 Statutory Code of Practice on Employment provides a detailed explanation of the provisions of the Act relating to discrimination in employment and work-related activities. The Code may be downloaded from the Equality and Human Rights Commission's website

The following sections are taken from the Statutory Code of Practice on Employment (Chapters 2 and 6) and provide information on the protected characteristic of Disability and the legal duty to make reasonable adjustments.

Disability

Only a person who meets the Act's definition of disability has the protected characteristic of disability. In most circumstances, a person will have the protected characteristic of disability if they have had a disability in the past, even if they no longer have the disability.

The Act says that a person has a disability:

'if they have a physical or mental impairment which has a long-term and substantial adverse effect on their ability to carry out normal day-to-day activities'.

Physical or mental impairment includes sensory impairments such as those affecting sight or hearing. Long-term means that the impairment has lasted or is likely to last for at least 12 months or for the rest of the affected person's life. Substantial means more than minor or trivial.

Where a person is taking measures to treat or correct an impairment (other than by using spectacles or contact lenses) and, but for those measures, the impairment would be likely to have a substantial adverse effect on the ability to carry out normal day to day activities, it is still to be treated as though it does have such an effect.

This means that 'hidden' impairments (for example, mental illness or mental health conditions, diabetes and epilepsy) may count as disabilities where they meet the definition of the Act.

Cancer, HIV infection and multiple sclerosis are deemed disabilities under the Act from the point of diagnosis. In some circumstances, people who have a sight impairment are automatically treated under the Act as being disabled.

Progressive conditions and those with fluctuating or recurring effects will amount to disabilities in certain circumstances.

For more on the concept of disability, see Appendix 1 of the Statutory Code of Practice on Employment. Guidance on matters to be taken into account in determining questions relating to the definition of disability is also available from the Office for Disability Issues

How to Procedure Occupational Health

5 How to Procedure Occupational Health

How To Procedure Occupational Health

The best source of support an employee can get is from a manager who knows and cares about their individual needs and who is aware of the range of resources that are available to maintain health and wellbeing.

Occupational Health is one such resource, that when used appropriately, can provide expert advice to both managers and employees.

1.0 Referrals to Occupational Health

1.1 In order to provide support to employees and to ensure that managers can seek the necessary advice, managers can at any time request that an employee attends Occupational Health. Management referrals should always be discussed with the employee before the referral so the employee is fully aware of the reasons for the referral and the importance of attending. A copy of the completed referral form should be given to the employee by the manager making the referral.

1.2 In very rare circumstances the employee may not consent to the referral to Occupational Health. In this case, the manager should politely and clearly set out to the employee why a referral is required and give the employee an opportunity to discuss the referral with them. If the employee refuses to discuss the referral and continues to withhold their consent, or continues to withhold their consent after the discussion, then the manager can still make the referral without the employees consent.

If a referral is made without the employee consent the rationale for this must be set out on the referral form.

1.3 An employee can self-refer to Occupational Health at any time. A discussion will be held with the employee at the time of the consultation as to whether it is felt appropriate for a report to be sent to their manager and whether they give their consent for this or unless legal or professional / regulatory requirements override this.

2. When to refer

2.1 There is no set time when to refer to Occupational Health. The optimum time to refer will depend on the manager "knowing their employee" and their individual circumstances. A manager does not have to wait until the employee goes off sick before making a referral to Occupational Health for advice and not every episode of sickness will require a referral. It is, however, essential that when termination of employment is being considered on health grounds, up to date Occupational Health advice has been obtained.

2.2 A referral may also be considered in the following circumstances:

- where there are concerns that the work being undertaken may be impacting on a health condition (even where the employee is not absent) N.B. this includes scenarios such as musculoskeletal issues / skin problems within a clinical role, symptoms of stress being demonstrated but as yet no sickness absence has occurred
- where there are general concerns regarding attendance

- after an employee has been, or is likely to be, absent for 28 calendar days where there is no clear return to work date
- where sensitive cases exist that are likely to be off long term, early referral should still be considered to access appropriate support and advice e.g. employees with cancer / long term condition
- if absence is due to stress and / or musculoskeletal / violence and aggression issues, an automatic referral to Occupational Health may not be required if the employee is able to access Wellbeing and / or Physiotherapy interventions and the manager is able to support the employee in the workplace. The manager may still make a referral to Occupational Health if advice on how to support the employee in the workplace is required
- referrals to Occupational Health in cases of short term absence are not routinely required, however, should be considered when guidance is required as to whether there is an underlying health condition impacting on frequent short term sickness absence
- where advice is required on reasonable / tailored adjustments not already in place, that can be implemented to reduce / remove the risk of aggravating an underlying health condition
- if health issues are impacting performance
- if there are concerns following medical suspension, injury, violence and aggression and ability to undertake elements of role
- in line with the Equality Act 2010
- routine, planned operations do not require an assessment unless there are complications or concerns about the employee's ability to return to work.

3.0 Referral process

3.1 Each NHS Wales Occupational Health Service will have its own referral pathway with unique forms and processes. Managers should ensure that they are aware of the Occupational Health referral process within their organisation.

3.2 Please be aware that employees have a legal right to request to see all documentation in their personal Occupational Health file including managerial referral forms.

3.3 When completing the referral form it is vital that the following is included:

- full name and date of birth
- correct telephone number for the employee
- information about the job and job tasks that are required to be undertaken
- factual background information regarding the situation. The Occupational Health professional assesses a case by taking into account the information from the manager, the information from the employee and the medical elements of the case. Information provided by the manager will ensure that the Occupational Health professional has sufficient information to undertake a full balanced assessment and to provide an effective report
- ask relevant questions, the referral report will address these to help the manager in managing the case.

3.4 This information is necessary to ensure time spent with Occupational Health is maximised, and that the assessment provided during the appointment can be used effectively by both the employee and the department.

3.5 Once an appropriately completed referral has been received by Occupational Health, it will be triaged by Occupational Health and an appointment will be arranged with the most appropriate professional / method.

3.6 The assessment will take place and a report will be generated responding to the questions raised in the referral. The Occupational Health professional will decide if further information is required from the employee's doctor, hospital specialist or other health professional to provide further guidance. In these cases the report may be delayed but Occupational Health will always inform the manager if this applies.

3.7 The Occupational Health professional will confirm with the employee their consent, at the time of the assessment for the release of the report to the line manager. Under the General Medical Council (GMC) guidance, the employee has a right to view the report before it is sent to the manager. In these cases the report may be delayed, however, Occupational Health will always inform the manager if this applies.

3.8 The employee can request factual changes but the Occupational Health opinion will not be changed. If consent is not provided, Occupational Health will write to the manager explaining that consent has not been provided.

3.9 If the employee does not wish to see the report prior to its release to the manager, then they will receive a copy at the same time.

3.10 In some circumstances, the Occupational Health professional may arrange to review the employee. The manager may be requested to provide a written update on the situation in order to ensure that the Occupational Health professional has up to date information during this consultation.

4.0 Failure to attend Occupational Health

4.1 If the employee is unable to attend their allocated appointment they must notify Occupational Health immediately so that another appointment can be arranged and the original appointment allocated to another employee.

4.2 Failure to attend without prior notice will be classified as a Did Not Attend (DNA) and the manager will be notified. According to NHS data each DNA can incur significant costs to the organisation. Therefore, it is essential that Occupational Health resources are utilised appropriately and the manager highlights the importance of attending the Occupational Health appointment when the referral is being made.

4.3 Failure to attend two consecutive appointments without notification will result in the referral process being stopped and the manager will be advised to seek Workforce advice and to manage the case without Occupational Health advice.

4.4 Failure to attend may result in limited information being available to the manager which may influence decisions and management of the absence to the detriment of the employee.

How to Procedure Return to Work

6 How to Procedure Return to Work

How to Procedure Return to Work

The return to work meeting is the single most important element in the management of sickness absence and it is important that it is undertaken consistently and appropriately after every period of absence. It is important that the return to work meeting is conducted on the first day of return or if that is not possible, as early as possible after their return. The form needs to be completed in full and dated. The return to work meeting is an excellent opportunity to review the employees' health and wellbeing and attendance record, offer any appropriate support and establish a plan to maximise future attendance.

The return to work meeting should be in the form of a supportive meeting and should not form part of any formal procedures. It should be carried out in a sensitive and considerate manner where the primary focus is ensuring that the employee is fit and well to carry out their duties required.

Return to work meetings should:

- be conducted in private, with sensitivity, and any issues should be explored in a caring and concerned manner
- be approached with an open mind, and give the employee the opportunity to discuss reason behind their absence
- not be judgmental and assumptions about the absence should not be made
- an opportunity for signposting to relevant support services
- consider whether any review prompt discussion is required

1. Notification of fitness for work

Employees must inform their manager on the first day that they regard themselves as being fit for duty whether or not they are due to work that day. This is important and will ensure that both their sickness records and their remaining entitlement to sick pay provision are accurate. To ensure overall sickness rates are accurate managers must also ensure that employees are recorded as fit for work on the first day the employee reports as being fit for work, even if the employee is not due to work that day i.e. weekends or non-rostered day.

2. Preparing for the return to work meeting

The manager must ensure they have all the relevant facts and information in advance of the meeting. This may include:

- E-Roster / ESR record
- absence calendar / monitoring record
- the Managing Attendance at Work Policy review prompts
- the appropriate How to Procedure to support the employees return to work
- medical advice
- previous absence related paperwork including reasonable / tailored adjustments agreements

3. When to hold the return to work meeting

The return to work meeting with the employee should take place on the first day back or as soon as possible following return. If this presents practical difficulties, it may be appropriate to conduct the meeting over the phone or for the manager to arrange to delegate the meeting to a nominated deputy. Regardless of the method, the return to work meeting should be completed no later than one week following return.

4. At the return to work meeting

4.1 Welcome

At the outset of the meeting, the manager should welcome the employee back to work and explain that it is routine to hold such a meeting and that it is in line with the Managing Attendance at Work Policy.

4.2 Discuss the Absence:

- ensure the employee is fit to work
- discuss the reasons for the absence and any relevant issues arising from it e.g. identifying any contributing factors (underlying health conditions / work related issues / domestic/ personal matters / pregnancy / menopause / breastfeeding etc.) and offering help, advice and/or signposting to relevant resources / services where appropriate
- assess the need for any reasonable / tailored adjustments to support their return to work
- consider whether the attendance record is directly attributable to a disability. Further information is available from the How To Procedure Reasonable / Tailored Adjustments.

- make the employee aware of their attendance record and whether the absence will necessitate a review prompt meeting, explaining the consequences and next steps in the process in line with the Managing Attendance at Work Policy
- consider if any further support is required, including Occupational Health, Employee Well Being Services, Our Wellbeing Matters / Manager Wellbeing Matters, Physiotherapy (where available).
- ensuring that they are proactively managing their health and wellbeing.

4.3 Documentation

The meeting should be documented on a Return to Work Form, along with a self-certification. If the episode of sickness results in a requirement for a review prompt meeting, the manager must apply *discretion regarding whether to instigate an informal / formal meeting as appropriate. The rationale with regards to escalation should be clearly documented. The form should be agreed with the employee and signed off by both parties as a fair record of what has been discussed. The form should be kept for future reference in the employees' personal file and a copy should be shared with them.

Enter the link to your organisations return to work form below:

Please copy and paste this link into your web browser to access your form.

4.4 Other policies

There may be occasions when consideration should be given to other Health Board / Trust policies and additional support offered to the employee. For example:-

- All Wales Dignity At Work Policy
- All Wales Special Leave Policy
- Alcohol and Drug/Substance Misuse Policy
- Flexible Working Policy

5. Returning from a long term sickness absence

Where an employee is returning from long term sickness absence, any support needs or workplace adjustments are likely to have been identified and should have been addressed prior to this meeting. However, the manager will have the opportunity to welcome the employee back, give any relevant workplace updates and confirm any arrangements or modified work schedules. It is also an opportunity to facilitate their return back into the workplace.

07

How to Procedure Phased Return and Temporary Redeployment

7 How to Procedure Phased Return and Temporary Redeployment

How to Procedure Phased Return and Temporary Redeployment

A phased return to work is now one of the standard options on a Fit Note. GPs and Medical Advisors often recommend that managers implement a phased return to support an employee's return to work. A phased return to work is an effective means of assisting employees who have been on long term sickness (more than 28 calendar days), back to work. It is based on the principle that the employee is well enough to carry out some aspects of their work, and is likely, given time, to recover sufficiently to continue in their substantive role - with or without reasonable / tailored adjustments (further information is available from the How to Procedure Reasonable / Tailored Adjustments). A phased return to work will not be suitable in every situation and would not normally be recommended after short term illness.

What is a phased return?

A phased return is a period of time following long term sickness absence where an employee works fewer than their full contracted hours and / or undertakes partial duties, in order to have a moderate reintroduction to work.

Arrangements for a phased return to work will, by definition, involve a change from the employee's normal work hours and / or restricted duties. A phased return can alter working hours in several ways. For example, a reduced number of days / shifts per week; shortening of the working day, including working only mornings or afternoons or by working shorter hours outside peak commuting time; by altering working hours to ensure that support / supervision is available throughout the shift.

Consideration should be given to whether work could feasibly be undertaken in a different location, for example at the employee's home or another NHS office closer to home by agreement. Further consideration should be given to whether the duties to be undertaken could be adjusted to reduce physical and / or mental effort during the period of phased return. The employee's health condition will determine what type of phased return to work plan could help achieve a successful return to work.

Length of a phased return

The length of a phased return should be agreed in discussion with the employee. Managers are advised to consider all relevant factors, including medical advice (where available), on a case by case basis (see "Discussing a Phased Return"). The average length of a phased return is four weeks but can be shortened or lengthened as required. A phased return would be expected to last a minimum of two weeks and a maximum of six weeks.

Hours worked during a phased return

This should be agreed between the employee and their manager. However, it is anticipated that the employee will work at least 30% of their contracted hours during the first week, increasing to 100% over the agreed period of the phased return. Annual leave and Bank Holidays which fall during the period of phased return should not be counted as part of the period.

When should a phased return be considered?

A phased return will usually be recommended in a Fit Note from the employee's GP, or in the medical opinion from Occupational Health. In addition to ticking the "phased return to work" option, GPs are required to advise on any restrictions / limitations. Where a medical opinion has been provided, consideration should be given to all additional guidance provided. Whilst phased returns will usually occur in the above way, managers are advised not to unreasonably refuse a reasonable request for a phased return from the employee or their representative. Alternatively, managers may consider that a phased return is appropriate in the circumstances. The absence of medical opinion should not prevent a reasonable phased return to work plan being agreed.

NB. Employees should not be referred to Occupational Health solely for advice regarding a phased return, particularly if this will delay the employee from returning to work.

Discussing a phased return

Where an employee advises that they are considering returning from long term sickness absence, a face to face discussion would usually take place as part of a long term sickness meeting. At these meetings, employees may arrange to be accompanied by a Trade Union official or colleague. It may become necessary for a separate meeting to be arranged, to finalise the arrangements of the return to work plan.

As a guide, the phased return to work meeting should consider the following points, along with any suggestions from the employee:

- when the phased return to work will commence

- the hours the employee will work during the phased return
- tailored adjustments that may be required during the phased return, further information is available in the How to Procedure Reasonable / Tailored Adjustments
- any further reasonable adjustments that might need to be made (for instance, a special chair or computer equipment to help counter the effects of any disability) and whether Access To Work might be able to assist, further information is available in the How to Procedure Reasonable / Tailored Adjustments
- at what location the employee will start the phased return (for example, at home or in the office)
- whether temporary redeployment needs to be considered and if so, whether it can be accommodated
- how long the phased return to work is expected to last
- what arrangements will be put in place to monitor the employee's progress and any difficulties encountered
- to whom the employee should report if they have any difficulties with the arrangements.

The manager should keep an open mind about what may be possible when discussing a phased return to work with the employee. It is important to consider suggestions from the employee. Where the employee's suggestions are not practicable, it is good practice for managers to recommend alternative practical proposals, rather than simply responding negatively.

If it is not possible to agree arrangements at the first meeting, due to more information being needed or further consideration of requests, a further meeting should be arranged. A record of the meeting(s) should be kept, along with agreed arrangements for the phased return.

Recording arrangements for a phased return

Phased return to work plans should be recorded on Appendix 1 Phased Return and Therapeutic Return Recording Form. The employee and manager should sign the form to agree the return to work plan. A copy should be retained by the employee as well as placed on the employee's personal file. If the agreement is reached during a long term sickness meeting, a long term sickness outcome letter may replace the form.

Monitoring the phased return

It is important that employee and manager monitor the phased return to ensure it is appropriate and supportive for the employee. In order to evaluate its success, targets should be set at the beginning of the phased return period and monitored at regular review meetings. The frequency of the reviews should be agreed prior to the commencement of the phased return, weekly meetings are advisable. If any problems are encountered the return to work plan may be adjusted accordingly and updated on the form.

Pay during phased return

Employees will be paid at their full contractual pay during an agreed period of phased return, including any contractual enhancements. Where an employee wishes to extend their phased return, beyond that agreed in the return to work plan this may be considered with utilisation of annual leave.

What happens if the phased return does not work?

If, despite all efforts, the phased return is unsuccessful, a further period of absence may be required.

A referral to Occupational Health should be considered with a view to obtaining further guidance on the likelihood of a successful return in future with or without reasonable / tailored adjustments and / or consideration to permanent or temporary redeployment. Further information is available in the How to Procedure Occupational Health.

Temporary Redeployment (up to 3 months)

If the employee is fit to attend work but not to their substantive post, or a phased return is attempted but is not successful, the manager may also consider whether or not there are any other posts that the employee can undertake in the organisation they are employed by or another NHS employer that is within their capabilities, if supported by Occupational Health advice.

In the first instance, temporary redeployment should be looked for within the employee's own organisation, however, in recognition of the varying sizes of NHS employers, geographical constraints, suitability of the redeployment and the nature of absence from work it should also be looked for in other relevant NHS organisations to see if temporary redeployment opportunities exist.

Every NHS employer within Wales should assign a named point of contact in Workforce who will be able to share the current list of vacancies that exist within the organisation. If a post is identified as suitable by Workforce the employee's line manager will be made aware and discussions will take place with the employee. If a suitable post is identified for a temporary period (up to 3 months) payroll will ensure that there is a transfer of salary and this should not be an impediment to a temporary relocation. When the redeployment is to a lower banded post the employee will not suffer a detriment in normal take home pay (in line with the phased return section of this policy).

The redeployment should be regarded as temporary, however, the time scales should be agreed between the employee (taking account of their specific circumstances), the substantive employer and the employer accepting the employee on a temporary basis for up to a period of 3 months. All aspects of the temporary redeployment should be discussed with the employee.

Temporary redeployment to another NHS organisation will be considered in conjunction with local redeployment protocols, not in conjunction with the All Wales Organisational Change Policy.

Steps in process:

1. Confirm if temporary redeployment is an option which the employee can agree to, in line with occupational health advice.
2. Are there suitable temporary redeployment opportunities with the employer (check with named contact in Workforce).
3. If the answer to 2. is no, establish what other NHS employers are suitable from a logistical point of view and obtain a list of opportunities from the named person in Workforce at these organisations.
4. If opportunities exist, the line manager and Workforce will initiate discussions to establish if the temporary redeployment can be agreed by the accepting employer and the employee in question.
5. Payroll will be informed and the necessary financial arrangements made.

Therapeutic Return / Reorientation

A therapeutic return can be a helpful way to enable employees that have been away from work to re-connect with colleagues in advance of a formal return to work. It may involve attending work for a meeting with the manager/team in order to keep up to date with what's been happening and overcome any initial anxieties about returning to work. The employee is still considered to be off sick whilst completing a therapeutic return. It is important to ensure the therapeutic return is limited to a small number of hours. No undue pressure or responsibility is applied to the employee during this period. It is expected that a therapeutic return is followed by a structured phased return to work.

NOTES OF DISCUSSION

Briefly review relevant documentation (fit notes/medical reports) and note discussion

Discuss advice regarding phased / therapeutic return

Ensure employee is aware of technical aspects of phased / therapeutic return, e.g. duration, pay

Discuss any adaptations needed to hours of work / work to be undertaken

Discuss whether therapeutic return might be helpful and how that could be accommodated

Agree any factors which need further consideration before phased / therapeutic return can be agreed

AGREEMENT

Outline the agreed phased return, ensuring that factors including timing, duration, hours of work each week, location, work to be undertaken / not undertaken, any agreed adjustments to be put in place, whether any therapeutic return is to take place, timing of regular reviews etc.

Identify any support / reasonable / tailored adjustments which may be required to enable the employee to undertake the phased return as set out above.

Employee and manager to sign below to agree above notes are a true record/and that the phased return has been agreed. Signed copy to be kept on the employee's personnel file and ESR updated.

How to Procedure Reasonable / Tailored Adjustments

How to Procedure Reasonable / Tailored Adjustments

Reasonable Adjustments

Employers are under a legal duty to make reasonable adjustments to ensure workers with disabilities, or physical or mental health impairments, are not disadvantaged when doing their jobs. This also apply to job candidates at the onset of the employment cycle.

The Equality Act 2010 defines a disability as an impairment that has a long term and substantial adverse effect on a person's ability to undertake normal day to day activities. Long term means that it must be expected to last for 12 months or more.

People with progressive conditions can be classed as disabled. A progressive condition is one that gets worse over time. You automatically meet the disability definition under the Equality Act 2010 from the day you are diagnosed with HIV infection, Cancer or Multiple Sclerosis.

Tailored Adjustments

Not all illnesses are disabilities, however, if an employee is asking for support with a health and wellbeing condition, it is best to provide support accordingly, assuming it is proportionate to do so. There are many benefits of this including supporting the employee back into work and to remain in work.

Tailored adjustments are short to medium term changes that can help support the health and wellbeing of the employee. Tailored adjustments should be considered and where possible implemented at the earliest opportunity to help an employee.

This can be arranged through discussion between a manager and an employee that is having difficulty with a known health and wellbeing condition. Tailored adjustments could include changes to working hours for a short period, changes to duties etc.

Why should managers make work based adjustments?

Beyond legal requirements for disabled employees, evidence has shown that good work is beneficial for health and wellbeing and that work can aid recovery for employees with physical and mental health conditions.

The proactive management of employees' mental and physical health can produce a range of benefits including greater employee engagement and productivity, reduction of sickness absence and reduced employee turnover.

Making small adjustments (reasonable / tailored adjustments) to enable an employee to remain in work during personal difficulties or when experiencing mild-moderate conditions that impact upon health and wellbeing in work.

Tailored adjustments are changes which can be agreed for varying reasons and periods of time based on individual needs that can be agreed through discussion between the manager and employee.

We recognise that managers should have a good understanding, and be familiar with the individual needs of their employees and any associated health and wellbeing conditions or disabilities that may affect their work. To support employees, reasonable / tailored adjustments should be considered and where possible implemented at the earliest opportunity to help an employee remain in work or reduce the need for sickness absence / aid an earlier return to work after a period of absence. Managers should consider such options when assessing an employee's health and wellbeing in situations where there is a reasonable expectation of improvement or where reasonable / tailored adjustments may prevent a deterioration. This proactive approach should enable an employee to maintain wellness at work and reduce the need for sickness absence.

2.0 Examples of reasonable / tailored adjustments

In many cases, simple and cost-effective workplace adjustments can make a big difference and enable people with health conditions and disabilities to remain in work and live healthy and productive lives. The adjustment needed could be a change in practice or workload. Some examples of reasonable / tailored adjustments might include:

- allowing additional breaks for an employee with a musculoskeletal difficulty to undertake self-management exercises
- temporarily reduced duties to enable an employee with anxiety to manage their working day effectively
- changing an employee's equipment, for instance providing an adapted keyboard if they have arthritis or providing a specialist chair because of back problems.

The aim of the adjustment is to minimise or reduce the impact of the health condition for the employee and enable them to carry out their job / duties. Contacting Workforce or Occupational Health may be required to discuss any conditions and a referral to Occupational Health should be considered if a specialist opinion is required, further information is available in the How To Procedure Occupational Health.

2.1 General approach

Wherever possible, the organisation will support employees that have a known health and wellbeing condition or disability. This support may be a legal requirement under the Equalities Act 2010, or good practice in supporting employees with mild-moderate health conditions. An employee with a health and wellbeing condition / disability can expect:

- a discussion with their manager
- for the matter to be dealt with confidentially and sensitively
- everything that is relevant to be considered
- all possible options and outcomes to be considered
- implementation of the identified and appropriate options, where they are reasonable and proportionate
- regular reviews.

2.2 Declaration of a Health and Wellbeing Condition / Disability

2.2.1 Where an employee with a health and wellbeing condition / disability reports that they are experiencing health difficulties it is important to respect their right to confidentiality and ensure on-going discussion.

2.2.2 The manager should meet with the employee in order to discuss their condition(s). The manager should seek to put in place any short term reasonable / tailored adjustments to ensure that the employee is not placing themselves at risk.

This may include conducting a risk assessment in order to identify any potential short-term adjustments. Completion of the Reasonable / Tailored Adjustment Agreement should be undertaken at this stage \(Appendix 1\).

2.2.3 If following the implementation of reasonable / tailored adjustments agreement, or where specific advice is required, the manager may consider making a referral to Occupational Health. The referral should include details of the discussion with the employee and a copy of the tailored adjustment agreement that has been put in place. A copy of the referral to Occupational Health should be discussed with the employee prior to submission. Further information is available from the How To Procedure Occupational Health.

2.2.4 On completion of the Occupational Health referral, the manager will receive a report advising in respect of any further suggested restrictions or adjustments that need to be considered. The manager should then meet with the employee in order to discuss and consider the Occupational Health report to enable a more informed discussion to be undertaken.

2.2.5 The purpose of the discussion is to consider the advice and what further reasonable / tailored adjustments could be put in place to enable the employee to continue undertaking the duties and responsibilities of their role and whether the adjustments are deemed reasonable.

2.2.6 Where there are barriers to progress, all parties have a duty to consider how these may be overcome; support from Workforce, Trade Union representatives, Equality Advisors and Occupational Health may be required. Ultimately it is the decision of the manager to determine whether any proposed reasonable / tailored adjustment can be accommodated.

3.0 Disability / Health and Wellbeing Condition Leave

Disability / Health and Wellbeing Condition leave is reasonable paid time off for a reason related to someone's known health and wellbeing condition and /or disability as part of a programme of care. Disability / Health and wellbeing condition leave is not disability related sickness absence. Effectively, it is a form of special leave and will usually be requested by the employee and approved by the manager in advance. Disability/ Health and wellbeing condition leave should be recorded on ESR. Typical examples of Disability / Health and wellbeing condition leave may include regular hospital and medical appointments / treatments / follow up assessments in respect of a known disability / health and wellbeing condition. Disability leave will typically apply to part, or the whole, of one working day.

4.0 Reasonable / Tailored Adjustment Agreement

4.1 The Reasonable / Tailored Adjustment Agreement is an on-going record of tailored adjustments agreed between an employee with a disability / health and wellbeing condition and their manager. In the case of reasonable adjustments it is anticipated these will continue to apply if the employee changes roles wherever possible.

The purpose of this agreement is to:

- Ensure that the employee and the manager, have an accurate record of what has been agreed.
- Minimise the need to re-negotiate reasonable adjustments every time the employee changes jobs, is re-located or assigned a new manager.
- Provide the employee and their manager with a basis for discussion about tailored adjustments at future meetings.

4.2 This is a live document and should be reviewed regularly by both the employee and manager and updated as appropriate. Specialist advice from third parties, such as Occupational Health and other practitioners may be needed. Managers who need help in deciding whether or not an adjustment is reasonable can contact Workforce for advice.

4.3 New managers of employees with agreed reasonable / tailored adjustments should accept the adjustments outlined in the agreement as reasonable and ensure that they continue to be implemented unless this causes significant operational difficulties, in which case further discussion will be necessary.

4.4 Reasonable / Tailored Adjustment Agreement will need to be reviewed and amended when changes occur. Where employees are moving to new roles / departments, they should make their new manager aware of any agreement in place and be prepared to discuss it.

4.5 The agreement allows the employee to:

- explain the impact of the disability / health and wellbeing condition on them at work
- suggest adjustments that will make it easier to do their job
- explain any change in their circumstances.

4.6 The agreement allows the manager to:

- understand how an employee's disability / health and wellbeing affects them at work
- explain the needs of the Organisation
- review the effectiveness of the adjustments already agreed
- explain any change in the employer's circumstances.

Advice on Reasonable / Tailored Adjustment Agreements are available from Workforce.

Reasonable / Tailored Adjustments

Requests for reasonable adjustments must be considered for staff who have conditions which could potentially be defined as a disability under the Equality Act 2010. Tailored adjustments should be considered to support employees with a health and wellbeing condition which may not be a disability as described above. Wherever possible, agreed adjustments should be implemented at the earliest opportunity to help the employee maintain wellness, remain in work and reduce the need for sickness absence. They may also aid an earlier return to work after a period of absence.

The purpose of this agreement is to:

- help an employee maintain wellness, remain in work, reduce the need for sickness absence and may aid an earlier return to work after a period of absence;
- ensure that both the employee and the employer have an accurate record of what has been agreed;
- minimise the need to renegotiate reasonable / tailored adjustments every time the employee changes job, is relocated or is assigned a new manager within the organisation; and
- provide the employee and their manager with the basis for discussions about reasonable / tailored adjustments at future meetings.

This agreement may be reviewed and amended as necessary with the agreement of both parties:

- at any regular one-to-one meeting;
- at a return to work meeting following a period of sickness absence;
- at six-monthly and / or annual PADRs;
- before a change of job, duties or work location, or the introduction of new technology or ways of working; or
- before or after any change in circumstances for either party.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Q What is the reasonableness of a Reasonable Adjustment?

Answer: This is difficult to define and is open to interpretation, managers must ensure they consider a range of aspects to determine whether or not an adjustment is reasonable and proportionate, these could include: the cost of the adjustment and the organisation's resources, the practicality of the adjustment, the efficiency of the adjustment in preventing the disadvantage, the disruption to the organisation and effects on others caused by the adjustment, health and safety considerations, the length of service of an employee, the amount of help and support already provided. This is not an exhaustive list but could be part of the considerations.

Q What is the difference between Tailored Adjustments and Reasonable Adjustments?

Answer: Tailored adjustments are an option managers can consider and if reasonable implement to support an employee with a known health and wellbeing condition/disability to remain in work during a period of difficulty. Reasonable Adjustments are a legal obligation on an Organisation.

Q. Do employees need to tell their employer that they have a health and wellbeing condition / disability?

Answer: There is no obligation on an employee or a job applicant to disclose their disability to their employer. However, when supporting employees with their absence or a health and wellbeing condition a manager should make reasonable enquiries to find out if an employee has a disability.

A manager could do this through discussion with the employee and if required with support from Occupational Health. Even if an employee is not classed as having a disability, considering and implementing tailored adjustments will help employees to maintain wellness and remain in work.

Q. Does the Reasonable / Tailored Adjustment agreement apply to employees who do not have a health and wellbeing condition that is considered as a disability?

Answer: The manager can consider and implement appropriate tailored adjustments to employees to help support their health and wellbeing.

Q What does a manager do if they cannot support specific Tailored Adjustments that have been suggested?

Answer: Where possible these adjustments should be supported and full consideration given to their implementation, however, if it is considered by the manager not to be reasonable, then further discussion with the employee is necessary to consider if there are any alternative adjustments that could be put in place as an option to aid the employee, the decisions why the adjustment cannot be accommodated should be documented and where this is not possible please contact Workforce for further advice.

Q What does a manager do if they cannot support specific Reasonable Adjustments that have been suggested?

Answer: There is a legal duty to consider requests for reasonable adjustments from employees whose disability/health and wellbeing condition may be covered by the Equality Act 2010. Every attempt should be made to accommodate these adjustments, further advice should be sought from Workforce.

Q What happens if an employee is no longer able to do their current job because of their health and wellbeing condition/ disability?

Answer: If an employee is no longer able to do their job even with all possible reasonable / tailored adjustments in place, please contact Workforce for advice.
